Slides 3–4 and 11 / Custody and Auto Send

Invity identifies BitGo as its institutional custodian. Its August newsletter describes Auto Send as a transfer to the selected Bitcoin address after the balance reaches a user-set fiat value. Confirm eligible balance, current threshold settings, fees, timing, markets and app screens before publishing.

Turbo Buy / Keep the mechanics separate

The current FAQ lists a 1.49% transaction service fee and a 9.9% annual Turbo fee on the extra buying power. It describes locked plan BTC, settlement on closure and automatic settlement if plan BTC falls below the extra capital used. The older 0.49% figure is superseded in the project research. Verify applicable fees and terms in the app before making comparisons.

Card / Release status

Invity's card page describes physical distribution starting in early December 2026 and virtual cards planned for Q1 2027. Confirm country, tier and live order availability before making any offer.

MiCA / Entity and markets

ESMA lists Invity Finance s.r.o. as authorised by the Czech National Bank on 11 February 2026. The row lists cross-border services for AT, DE, IT, SK, ES, NL and PL. Check sign-up and feature availability separately. The six-market plan in the deck is an operating proposal.

After You Buy / Auto Send

Start on X with a question people can ask with their balance open. Have a human answer the hard custody question in the replies. Make Instagram panels on destination, threshold and review. Use approved screens for the YouTube walkthrough. Link to current local help where available.

HODL / Same sats

For HODL, use the existing artwork and link to the original BitcoinTalk post. The thread tells the story. For Same sats, use a fixed BTC balance to show how the fiat quote can move. If we tie it to a market note, date the example and clear the copy.

First buy / The quote screen

Use the existing fee artwork as a storyboard frame. The shared video opens on the same approved screen, pauses on the quote and follows the purchase to its destination. Keep the €100 comparison in research until comparable quotes, fees and withdrawal conditions are captured with matching inputs and timestamps.

Paid pilot / €500 over 30 days

This is the smallest monthly Meta preset in Strategy Lab, used here as a planning example. Start with one eligible market. If supported, assign audiences concurrently to the two hooks and keep the footage, first frame, CTA and distribution fixed. Define early retention before launch. Read completion, saves, shares and substantive questions where measurable. Use first purchase data only with adequate volume and approved tracking.

Cadence and creator brief

The cadence assumes one lead and access to Product and local review. Build reply coverage first. Pilot one local creator’s wallet walkthrough with agreed usage rights, a tracked link or code and any required advertising disclosure before paid amplification. The planning budget covers media only.

Who signs off

Proposed review rules for one social lead and local reviewers

CHANGE	REVIEW OWNER	RELEASE CONDITION
Editorial copy or routine reply	Social lead	Matches approved voice and claims. Escalate account-specific issues to Support.
Product mechanics, fees or screens	Product owner	Current product source and app state match the wording.
Market copy or destination	Local reviewer + Product	Language, eligibility, feature availability and link checked.
Paid, creator or regulated claim	Compliance + Social	Local disclosures and claims cleared. Rights and platform permissions confirmed.

Grokbot setup and escalation

Build the voice guide around approved examples. Keep a claims register with wording, URL, owner, locale, date and review expiry. Schedule a weekly digest of public competitor posts and a recurring-question brief from public or de-identified inputs. Stale or conflicting claims go to Product or Compliance. The social lead approves and publishes. Keep private account details out of the bot workflow.

Market handoff

The central brief carries the audience question, approved fact, channel and suggested CTA. Local reviewers adapt the opening and check the actual help link and feature state. Hold a version if any check fails. Record live links, substantive replies and any feature confusion. Bring repeated questions into the next central brief.

Application material and visual status
